Nearly 62% of all high school theatre educators hold graduate degrees.

Young children taught in theatre arts integration classrooms have higher attendance rates.

Nine in ten agree that it is important for K-12 students to receive an education in the arts including dance, media arts, music, theater, and visual arts.

Creative drama enhances fluent and flexible thinking in young students.

Nearly two-thirds of corporate executives agree that a degree in the arts is the most significant indicator of creativity.

“Arts education isn’t something we add on after we’ve achieved other priorities, like raising test scores and getting kids into college. It’s actually critical for achieving those priorities in the first place.”

Young adults who had arts-rich experiences in high school are more likely to engage in public volunteerism.

For more information and to learn how you can get involved, visit schooltheatre.org/TIOS